Senate will not protest investments

By COLETTE RAUSCH

In a close vote, the ASUN Senate denied Wednesday a motion to help organize a protest against the university's investments in South Africa.

The 10-9 vote came after a lengthy, often heated discussion.

"I don't think the senate should decide on political issues in the international realm," Arts & Science senator John Schlegelmilch said. "I say we shouldn't interfere in another country's affairs. We are not God."

Business senator Teke Kelly agreed. "The protest would be an exercise in futility," Kelly said.

He cited the economic situation in South Africa and said, "It'll hurt the people we're trying to help."

Arts & Science senator Mary Kandaras disagreed with both Schlegelmilch and Kelly.

"Let's take an ideological stand," Kandaras said.

She said if college campuses all get together and protest it could have an impact.

"I say let's give it a shot, go for it, no more apartheid," Kandaras said. Journalism senator Kristin Miller criticized those in opposition to a protest.

"You are thinking with a cash register instead of a heart," she said.

"Our actions may not make a difference, but sometimes you have to make a stand on what you believe is right," Miller said after the meeting.

The Nigerian Student Association, which requested support for a protest, was told by the senate that it can bring the issue up again in the next senate meeting.

In other actions the senate:

- Received the resignation of Kandaras. In a letter to Senate President

Larry Levine, Kandaras said she couldn't devote enough time to do a quality job for her constituents.

- ASUN President Ted Lancaster said a survey will be conducted to find what students want regarding health services.

Lancaster said he wanted to find out why out of 8,000 students, only 3,000 paid the $30 health service fee.

"Is it the fact they were pissed off for the fee going to athletics or that they didn't care?"

A $30 optional fee was instituted for

Sigma Nu getting undeserved flack

By RICK HOOVER

The Sigma Nu fraternity may have regained its charter, but its problems are not over.

Calls have been made to the Reno Police Department reporting incidents of violence and excessive noise that both Sigma Nu and police officials said never happened.

Reno police were called to the fraternity at 1075 Ralston three times between Sept. 5 and Sept. 15.

"On two different occasions, the police department responded to a report of a fight," John Gonzales, president of the Sigma Nu fraternity said. "The persons filing the reports told the police that the people involved left a minute before they got there."

"On Sept. 5, we had a social with the Pi Phi's (Pi Beta Phi sorority). There was a report of excess noise, but when the police arrived, they said they would not have known there was a party if they had not come inside."

Sgt. Daryl Pelizzari of the Reno Police Department agreed.

"A call came in at 11:15 of excess noise at the Sigma Nu house," Pelizzari said. "Two officers responded to the call, but it was quiet on arrival."

On Sept. 12, a little sister rush party was held at the fraternity.

"At 9:45, a complaint was made that several vehicles were illegally parked on Ralston," Pelizzari said. "Some citations were issued, and some cars were towed."

On Saturday, Sept 14, Sigma Nu had a function known as "Shipwreck Kelly's."

"Seven units responded to a report of a riot," Gonzales said. "I had been outside for an hour, making sure everything was being kept clean and that people weren't hanging around outside the house. I know nothing was going on."

Two fights were reported to the police on Sept. 14 and 15. Both times

City council to vote on jurisdiction

By DIANNE DRINKWATER

Reno City Council is considering adoption of an ordinance giving UNR police officers reserve officer status with the Reno Police Department thus increasing their jurisdiction, according to Reno Police Chief Robert Bradshaw.

Bradshaw said the proposal, which will be discussed at the Oct. 14 city council meeting, would allow UNR police officers to intervene in off-campus incidents involving university students or faculty.

"The proposal would allow for concurrent jurisdiction for affairs common to both of us," Bradshaw said. "This would include fraternity and sorority houses and parties with an UNR clientele."

Ray Wedmore, director of the UNR department of public safety, said the board of regents approved the idea of expanded jurisdiction for the department last spring when the issue was originally broached and a survey conducted in July indicated university-area residents support such a move.

"The neighbors recognize many problems in their area as university-related and see nothing wrong with letting my department take care of them," Wedmore said.

If the proposal is adopted, both UNR and Reno police officers would respond to a call involving university students or faculty.

The big selling point, according to Wedmore, is the flexibility UNRPD will have in dealing with a disturbance.

"Reno doesn't have a lot of options if they come to a frat house," he said. "They either arrest or don't arrest. We can use the authority of the university to suggest to individuals not to continue their course of action. Most students seem to care more about their grades than spending a night in jail."

Wedmore noted that the university has several different ways — other than jail sentences — to discipline unruly people including probation and expulsion.

Current regulations limit the university police jurisdiction to campus-owned property and to the center-line of streets adjacent to the campus.

Under the terms of the proposal, UNRPD would conceivably have city-wide jurisdiction but administratively that authority would be limited to the area immediately surrounding the university, Wedmore said.

"Our intent — or rather, the university's intent — is to obtain the authority needed to assist the Reno Police Department with university-related disturbances," he said.

ASUN Senator John Schlegelmilch said the senate has not taken an official stance on the issue, but he personally feels the measure violates the decision of the legislature.

"Basically what they're trying to do goes against what the legislature told them last year," he said. "They asked for expanded jurisdiction and legislature told them no, so now they're going around that and saying, 'we'll just deputize UNRPD in the Reno P.D.'"

The university police department requested a similar expansion in jurisdiction last year from the state legislature.

The request, which would have expanded their jurisdiction to the area surrounding the campus (rather than to university people off campus), died in committee.

The Assembly Judiciary Committee, which heard the proposal, said the issue was a local one and should not be resolved by the state legislature.

Wedmore said it was important to note that UNRPD officials will not be patrolling the area around campus, but will only intervene in off-campus incidents when requested by Reno police.

"Our primary concern is the university and its property," he said. "We will only act with peace officer authority outside this area when required to do so."

Wedmore noted the reverse would also be true — if UNRPD decided Reno police were better equipped to handle a situation, their assistance would be requested.

He explained that under current law, UNR police officers have no more authority than a civilian when they are off university property, a frequent occurrence since officers must pass through city property to get to far-flung university buildings.

"He's out there in uniform with full regalia and people in the city see him as a police officer but he has no authority as a police officer," Wedmore said. "People still have an expectation of service from him and increasingly, society is saying he should act as a police officer."

Bradshaw said he felt the primary concern of the city council was the control of the UNR officers.

"They feel if they are working in our jurisdiction, they will have to be under our control," he said, noting that the only sanction that would be available to the city if a UNRPD officer violated policy would be to remove him from reserve officer status.

"The rest is up to Wedmore," he said.

Job rate is up in advertising

By DIANE BANEGAS

Do you like to make big money?

Are you creative and curious?

Do you consider yourself ahead of your time?

If so, maybe you belong in advertising.

"A lot of students want to be in advertising and don't know it," Dr. Joseph Howland, a UNR journalism professor, said in a recent interview.

Howland said advertising offers a myriad of career options such as photography, art, writing ad copy, sales and management positions.

Student enrollment in UNR's advertising program has increased steadily since 1978 when one elective course was offered.

Eighty-five students are enrolled in the advertising sequence, with additional students from other fields of study also taking classes.

Howland said he attributed the increase to the economy and to more jobs available in advertising.

"It's no longer unforgivable to want to make money," Howland said. "Ad agencies are still healthy and almost every company today has an ad department. They need someone who understands the business."

Advertising executives quite often end up as heads of companies, Howland said.

"You may not make as much money working for a company as you do for an ad agency but you have more job security," Howland said. "At agencies the situation is reversed."

Howland cited a co-worker whose starting salary with an ad agency was $12,000 a year. Three years later she had climbed to $50,000.

A former UNR graduate is handling the Carson Valley Inn account.

It started out small, but the hotel-casino in Minden now does a business that has surpassed most predictions, he said. It is no longer a small account.

"There is no salary limit in advertising if you prove you've got the stuff," Howland said.

Advertising graduates can have it all if they're willing to go for the job but many students limit themselves because they don't want to leave the area, he said.

It takes two years to complete the UNR advertising sequence. On graduation students have compiled a portfolio, worked on four advertising campaigns and served an internship at a business or agency.

Gray Reid's department store, Mr. Video and First Interstate Bank are among the accounts that UNR students have worked on.

"Students are exposed to the real environment — people and problems," Howland said. "They learn to deal with reluctant managers and impossible requests."

Students sometimes work with an agency to develop a campaign.

"When you first talk to a client you don't know what medium you'll wind up using — it depends on the product," Howland said.

Products with general appeal are advertised on TV, while radio and magazines are used for specialized products.

Howland said he was introduced to the advertising business by his mother who wrote ads for his father's automobile business.

According to Howland, advertising people must be forward-thinking.

"You live in a world that hasn't happened yet," he said. "A typical magazine is planned six months in advance, but it must look fresh when it hits the stands."

Howland served as president of his own advertising agency in Ohio for 12 years and headed the Ball Advertising Agency in Chicago for five years. From 1945 to 1956 he worked as an editor at "Better Homes and Gardens" and "House Beautiful" magazines. He holds a doctorate in soil physics and plant physiology from Cornell University.

Howland describes a good ad person as someone with enormous curiosity.

"They are the people who always want to know 'why?'"

Specialist to teach his methods for handling stress in one-day seminar

A major project behind schedule?

A term paper due date missed?

Overloaded with exams?

Overstressed?

Dr. Gary Fellows, a specialist in teaching the techniques of effectively handling stress, may be able to help.

A one-day learning session, "How to Manage Stress" will be offered Nov. 6 at the Airport Plaza Hotel from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. It is worth six Continuing Education units.

Unmanaged stress is a major contributing factor in many diseases, and stress can sap energy and enthusiasm.

Fellows' seminar teaches techniques for maintaining a high level of productive energy and enthusiasm while controlling unhealthy tension.

"No matter how hard you like to work, learning my system for stress management can make you feel better and be even more productive," Fellows said.

Fellows teaches how to recognize the danger signals of stress and burnout and how to handle the two common personality traits that lead to undue stress — perfectionism and procrastination.

"Skills like these will not only help you in your career, but can pay off in every aspect of your life," Fellows said. "The information we'll cover in this fascinating day would take you years of trial and error experience to gather on your own."

The National Seminars, Inc. advertises Fellows as being, "a stimulating communicator who combines a wealth of practical strategies for managing stress with a warm, personable representation style...one you'll enjoy and remember for years to come."

"The task of successfully managing stress is a challenging one," Fellows said. "Yet there are great rewards for those who master the necessary skills."

A $49 fee covers tuition, refreshments, instruction and material.

To register, or for more information, call toll-free 1-800-258-7246.

Forum on drugs

The growing problem of drugs and teenagers is the topic of a free public forum offered by TMCC and the Washoe County Library from 7 to 9 p.m. on Oct. 8.

Panelists include Sean Moore, Program Director, Reno Professional Counseling Center; Dr. William Thornton, Medical Director, Reno Professional Counseling Center; Frank Lemus, Counselor, Washoe High School; Peg Caldwell, R.N., Education Specialist, Reno Professional Counseling Center; and a former drug abuser to share his personal story.

The forum will be held at the Washoe County Library auditorium on Center Street. For more information, call the college at 673-7103.

Ballet teacher will face a tough test

By CHRIS CARROLL

Barbara Fox, UNR's sole ballet instructor, will soon be exposed to one of the most intense examinations of her career.

On Oct. 22, Fox and two of her students will travel to Las Vegas to be tested on every aspect of ballet.

They will take on the Royal Academy of Dance exam — a week-long, grueling test of ballet skills.

Fox was the first dancer in Northern Nevada to receive the Governor's Art Award in 1983.

"If I pass the exam, I'll be regarded as an instructor of the RAD in London," she said.

To her, an examiner would be the ultimate.

"It will probably take me 'til I'm fifty but I want to be one of those nasty old ladies who tests dancers all over the world," she said.

The RAD is not a ballet school, but an international examining body, setting and safeguarding standards of dance throughout the world.

"Nobody knows how very intense the RAD is," Fox said. "Passing this exam is one of the most prestigious honors of any ballet career."

"The organization exists to raise the standards of ballet teaching."

"You have to know ballet inside and out," Fox said. "Only three people in the U.S. have taken the exam. One passed and two failed."

Fox practices four and a half to five hours a day as well as coaching students.

"I'm doing this because in the future, I want to become an examiner and travel all over the world testing others," Fox said.

Fox plans to travel to London to study for a year.

"I have to go to London," she said.

"The work I need to study isn't even taught here."

In May, UNR will become a testing center for children, and a judge from London will travel to Reno to conduct an exam.

In 1986, the RAD will require anyone teaching the Royal Academy work to be registered.

"By then I'll be registered and on my way to my goal — an examiner," Fox said.

Seminars to improve studying

By KIM RUSCHE

There may just be something to help students remember logarithms, Spanish verb tenses, and the capital of Botswana.

The seminars, "15 Ways to Succeed at UNR," will improve study habits.

The seminars were carefully selected to meet the needs of the students and their problem areas.

Some of the topics that will be discussed are Test Taking, Critical Reading and Essay Writing — Essay Exams.

"There will be a jump in the quality of students' work if they put this information into effect," Monica Grecu, director of the seminars, said.

"The attitude of students today is to make money," Grecu said. "We're trying to bring intellect back into perspective through these seminars." This will hopefully be achieved by stressing professional accuracy, precision and ethics.

The seminars are every Tuesday from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and Thursday from 2 to 3 p.m.

The seminars started Tuesday and will continue through Oct. 24.

"Students in this area aren't fed with higher education in high school because Reno is a small city," Grecu said. "So when the students get to college, they drop out or only take a few classes and stretch their education over many years. All the students need is a boost to get them confident in themselves. That's what these seminars want to achieve."

In September not as many students came as Grecu counted on.

"I hope during this second month more students will learn of this free service and take advantage of it."

Sign-ups for the seminars are in the Thompson Student Service Center building in room 107.

4-H'ers to celebrate national week

By DIANE BANEGAS

Next week, Oct. 6-12, is National 4-H Week.

Membership in Nevada's biggest youth organization has more than doubled in the past five years, climbing from 15,788 in 1979 to 46,714 in 1984.

Nationally, 4-H involves 4.5 million youth, ages 9 to 19.

"Collegiate 4-H is a service organization to younger 4-H'ers," Devin Rattazzi, president of UNR collegiate 4-H, said in a recent interview.

He said UNR 4-H'ers have planned two displays to promote the organization, one in front of the College of Agriculture and one in the main branch of the First Interstate Bank.

"People tend to think that 4-H is all animals, it's mainly a service club," Rattazzi said.

Dave Mathis, spokesman for the College of Agriculture, said 4-H youth projects today vary from raising livestock to the home arts such as sewing and cooking, to high-tech projects of computers and rocketry.

The club is for all youths, whether they live in cities or on farms, he said.

Rattazzi said he was a 4-H'er as a boy and collegiate 4-H rekindled his interest in the organization.

He said he likes helping kids and plans to work as a 4-H volunteer when he finishes college.

Job interviewing on campus

By COLETTE RAUSCH

Graduating seniors have the opportunity to receive job offers before they even graduate.

On campus recruiting begins next week and is coordinated through the Career Planning and Placement Center.

"One benefit of interviewing on campus is students receive exposure to a number of national corporations," Dianne Holt, coordinator of placement services, said. "The process allows students to do part of their job-hunting in a centralized location with the prospective employer coming to them."

She said to interview with the companies, a student must graduate either in December or May and be registered with the center.

Registration involves completing an academic informational form and paying a $5 fee. The student then asks for recommendations from instructors and employers.

The credentials (informational form and recommendations) are provided by the center to the recruiters with whom the students interview.

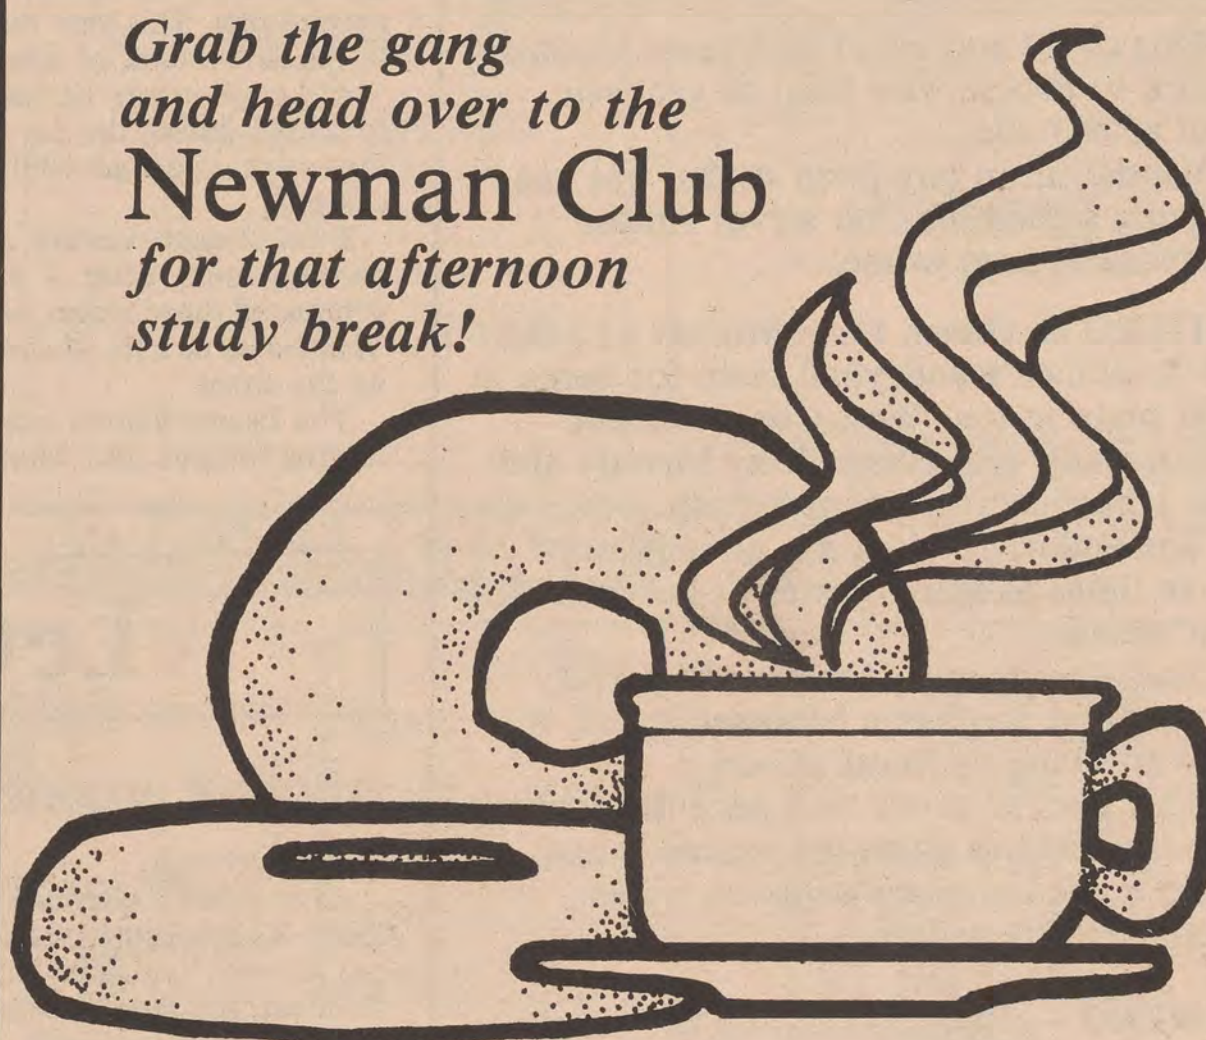

"Students' credentials supplement the resume and interview," Holt said. "They provide the recruiter with additional information needed to determine the ultimate desirability of the candidate."

Here is a run-down on next week's recruiting activity:

DAY	RECRUITER	MAJORS NEEDED
Mon.	DARCOM	Elect. Engineer
Tues.	Beecham Products	Mktg., Mgmt.

Opinion

UNS zero, student hero

ZERO — The University of Nevada System for investing in more than 20 companies doing business in South Africa.

The investors are only doing what they are told by the board of regents so the regents should tell them to stop investing.

The system seems to have a make-money-at-all-costs attitude. However, just because something is making money doesn't mean it is right.

The board of regents, and all the administrations of the UNS should consider the question of whether making money is more important than fighting something that is wrong.

The UNS taking away its investments may not make a big difference, but it will make a difference — a start for what is right.

HERO — UNR student Jeffrey Meckfessel for spotting the license plate number of a hit-and-run driver on Virginia Street.

Meckfessel and his girlfriend Jennefer Halteman were walking on Virginia Street when a three-car accident occurred.

Meckfessel and Halteman first checked to see if there were any serious injuries.

When one of the cars started to drive away, Meckfessel followed it, recorded the license number and gave it to the Reno Police when officers arrived.

ZERO — The idiot or idiots who have been vandalizing the university post office.

The post office doors are open all hours for the convenience of everyone. However, if the vandalism continues, hours will be shortened to between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m.

This could end up to be a great inconvenience to people who want to get their mail after hours.

Vandalism in any form stinks, but vandalizing something that serves almost everyone is even worse.

HERO — Coach Lane Murray and the UNR women's volleyball team for being in first place in the West Coast Athletic Conference, and coach Tony Melody and the women's cross country team.

The volleyball team has already won three times as many games as the team did last season.

The cross-country team, led by Patty Young and Stephanie Mousset-Jones, is also enjoying its finest season.

This goes to prove that once the athletic department has given the women's program some monetary support, it has responded by winning.

HERO — Pam Powell and the other members of Students Against Multiple Sclerosis for sponsoring a Rock Alike contest to help fight the disease.

The actions of Powell and the other UNR students involved in the program show that students aren't as apathetic as some people think.

Student safety not considered

Despite the fact that parking is supposed to be part of the Department of Public Safety, the Parking Department has blatantly ignored the factor of student safety in their decision to install ticket spitters.

While students may lollygag around the Student Union during the day, the JTV parking lot takes on a completely different aspect at night. Its appeal: it's close to the library. The parking lot behind the library (you know, the one which will shortly have a ticket spitter) is also favored for the same purpose.

Let's face it. There are many spots on this campus which are poorly lighted and tend to become a little scary at night. The fact that there are on the average of five rapes per year on this campus would seem to say that students aren't the only people who have noticed this. This year there have been four assaults in the first month of school.

Although it may be feasible to walk or ride a bike to school during the day, students would be putting themselves in danger while in the process of getting to campus.

Even though we are allowed to use the faculty parking areas after 4 p.m., the construction has eliminated those spaces which are close to the library. That leaves us a lot of choice: the main parking lot or on the street.

The Escort System works just fine if students are leaving campus. But what do you do if you are coming to campus? Do you call the police department and say, "Yes, I'm coming to campus in about 15 minutes. Will you please wait for me somewhere in the main parking lot?"

Or you could park off campus in order to be close to the library and have them tell you, "It's out of our jurisdiction."

According to informal surveys done by ASUN, student sentiment seems to indicate that people don't trust police officers as escorts.

It is ridiculous for the "Department of Public Safety" to expect students, especially women, to walk down from the main parking lot to the library at night.

The construction at Church Fine Arts has made the access routes to campus darker (not to mention dangerous if you walk along the edge of the construction site) and longer.

Even if Virginia Street is fairly well lit, it's not particularly fun to deal with the non-student population which drives down Virginia Street in hot rods.

There are still dark and isolated spots on the way. The Old Gym is a prime example, complete with bushes to hide potential attackers.

The parking department should reconsider its decision to enforce the ticket spitters on a 24-hour basis.

There aren't many visitors to the campus at night who need access to the lot. For once it should do its job and consider its primary function: safety.

Another experience with parking

Dear Sagebrush,

After reading your article on the parking situation (Sept. 27 Sagebrush), my opinion of Frances Martini has not only remained unchanged, it has actually intensified. It's nice to see such dedicated people working for a state institution. I think she should change her professional title to "Parking Czar"; she seems to be just a little to the right of Attila the Hun. It appears her idea of the ideal parking situation would be to tear down the University to make way for a giant 17,000 car parking lot, each space with its own fifty-cent-an-hour-Ticket-Spitter. Actually, she would leave Lawlor as a giant Schwinn dealership for all those people who own Volkswagens.

To be sure my experience with Ms. Martini (yes, Gloria, that was a derogatory use of the word) is not solely based on one newspaper article. I have had the pleasure of having my automobile towed courtesy of the UNRPD Towing & Wrecking Company at a paltry $50 (just to move it to the other side of campus). It seems that I allegedly had two tickets from over two years ago, and instead of notifying the Nevada DMV for a hold on my automobile registration, or putting a hold on my University registration, they took matters into their own hands (the car was actually on University grounds, and I'm surprised they didn't call out UNSWAT) and towed the car. And in the true spirit of Communism, they attached a $25 ticket to the final bill, because I had other tickets; in other words, they gave me a ticket because I had a ticket. I can't wait for the State of Nevada Corrections Department to follow suit by putting prisoners in jail for being current convicts. Being the Public Relations Expert that she is, she was verbally abusive, and threatened to have my car taken to another safe and clean place, the Nevada Auto-wrecking yard, if I didn't pay my $87 HERE AND NOW! Pulling out $90 that I really didn't have, I handed it over to her. It would have been nicer if she hadn't drooled so much as the money touched her hands.

Ms. Martini, I am so tired of the Bleeding-Heart-Me-And-My-Brother-Walked-Thirteen-Miles-In-The-Snow-To-Go-To-School Spiel. I think you would be better employed as a Prison Matron where you and your unenlightened despot attitudes could be put to better use.

Sagebrush inaccurate

To the Editor:

The parking situation at UNR is not being improved by inaccurate reports from members of the Parking Board or slanted and sensational reporting in the Sagebrush.

What a person does while legally parked is irrelevant. It is likewise irrelevant that, decades ago, students were not allowed to even own cars, much less bring them on campus, that previous generations endured all sorts of hardships with a smile, and that parking is so much better and cheaper at UNR than on other campuses. None of these statements addresses the issues.

The fact is that there aren't — and will probably never be — sufficient parking spaces even reasonably close enough for everyone. Parking space is a scarce resource that has to be shared by students, faculty and staff, administrators, visitors, the handicapped, delivery and maintenance people, and campus vehicles. The question is how to accomplish this end equitably and most effectively.

Parking policy is made by the university administration. There is a Parking Board which is advisory to the administration and has wide campus representation. The director of the Parking Division is a specialist in the area of campus parking, and the university looks to his department for judicious implementation of policy.

Contrary to common belief, the primary purpose of parking meters is not to raise money but rather to discourage the prolonged occupying of prime parking space by a small number of people. Meters force people to leave within a designated amount of time and encourage long-term parkers to park farther away. That is why meters in the center of cities — and adjacent to student unions on campuses — cost more for shorter amounts of time than meters a little bit removed.

With the installation of ticket spitters, one will be able to buy several one-hour tickets and display them together for the number of hours desired. There will be 30 or more such spaces in the student union lot, and the cost will be 50 cents for each hour. Four of the meter spaces will remain for people who need to run into and out of the union building. The time limit will be 30 minutes, and the cost will be a nickel for 15 minutes and a dime for 30 minutes. It was wise to experiment with the ticket spitter on one lot before installing it on others. Let's hope that it will be equally successful on the student union lot as it has proven to be on the Clark Administration lot.

Thoughtful input is needed to improve UNR's parking situation. What is not needed is dissension and bickering. Come up with solutions that can be implemented within the limitation of space and funds. A centrally located high-rise parking garage or underground parking areas under every new building have already been thought of. Unless a source of money can be found for this type of solution, these ideas are about as practical as that of students' using bicycles to get from their parking lots to their classes. SHS commended

To the Editor:

With all the hullabaloo regarding the transfer of funds from the health service budget to the Athletic Department crowding students' minds, no one has taken the time to applaud the efforts of the personnel at the University of Nevada-Reno's Health Service. I would like to do so at this time. Each time I have had to utilize this service, I have been welcomed, given courteous service, and have been given professional advice. These efforts should be brought to the attention of all UNR students, faculty and staff. This service is four you — regardless of the politics of a fiscal budget. If you would like to see this service offered in the future, support it.

Sincerely,
Laurie Sargent

Why charge bikes?

To the Editor:

I can understand charging extra fees for the Health Service and I can understand raising the credits for this and for that, and I can even understand the reason for a raise in car permits.

But to charge a bicycle rider for parking his bicycle on campus is getting a little steep. I don't care if it's only $1 a year, it's the principle of the matter. It's also a waste of time and money. The student's money.

If I were a bicycle rider, I would be pretty discouraged to even come to school. Things are getting out of hand!

IS UNR HURTING THAT BAD TO STOOP SO LOW?!

I think it's great to see some students ride their bikes to school. It's good exercise and it doesn't cause pollution. Bicycles are so compact that they don't get into anyone's way at school.

I can see it now, little sticker permits covering bicycles everywhere. How ridiculous! COME ON UNR, GIVE US A BREAK!

Can't a UNR student go anywhere on campus, except the library, without being charged?!

Turner electrifying at Lawlor

By JULIE COLLINS

As Tina Turner prowled the stage like an angry cat in heat, the electricity poured from her body endlessly. The audience hung on her every word as she broke from singing to speak a few words to her frenzied fans.

"You know, people keep asking me when I'm gonna slow down," she said in a commanding voice. "I tell 'em I'm just getting started!"

The reaction was as expected. The crowd went wild.

And for good reason. Through three costume changes and an hour and a half of singing, screeching, dancing and shaking, Turner continually emerged a gem.

Turner performed to a near sold-out crowd at Lawlor Events Center Wednesday night and proved that at 46, no one can touch her.

Her re-emergence as the queen of rock'n'roll is a phenomenal comeback considering her battered past with ex-husband and mentor Ike Turner. Ten years after leaving her abusive husband with 36 cents in her pocket she has collected three Grammys, four hit singles from her four-times platinum LP, "Private Dancer," and a starring role with Mel Gibson in "Mad Max Beyond Thunderdome."

She also became the first black woman to appear on MTV.

But Wednesday night showed that success seems to have left her unfazed. From the beginning of her opening song, "Show Me Some Respect" to her ending rendition of Bruce Springsteen's "Dancing in the Dark," she was non-stop.

While singing her hit single "Better Be Good To Me," the audience knew just how to do it. She didn't have to tell them to stand up and clap, they just did.

Her back-up band kept the energy level high as Turner disappeared backstage to slip out of her white leather jumpsuit which clung tightly to her fit body. Prancing to front stage came her sax player who commanded almost as much attention as Turner did. Dressed in jeans decorated with S&M belts and a tank top which exposed his massive muscles, the long-haired musician looked as though he could have stepped out of a Mad Max movie himself.

Minutes later, Turner returned clad in a white feathered mini-dress to sing an impressive "Private Dancer." As the lights went off, so did the outfit. Turner emerged in a dress similar to the one she wore in Mad Max with a guitar strapped across her shoulder. A large video screen overhead projected scenes from her movie as she sang "We Don't Need Another Hero."

Turner made frequent attempts to insure attention was paid to those unfortunate enough to have seats behind the stage.

The fans attending the concert were all of varying degrees. Some were old. Some were young. A few were Madonna-wanna-be's, there to make a fashion statement.

But in the end as they left the concert, they all had the same look: enlightened, happy and full of energy. Just like Tina.

UNR quartets to go on tour

By CHRISTOPHER SMITH

To play in a top-notch band quartet one must have talent, endless drive and much musical inclination.

This would seem to be the case with Dr. David Ehrke's saxophone and clarinet quartets at UNR.

"Usually, the good students will play in the quartet their second or third year, and the exceptional ones will play in their first year," Ehrke, associate professor of music, said.

If you aren't qualified to play, then Ehrke will welcome your listening abilities when his quartets are set to perform.

"There's really some good music being played," he said. "It's live, and it's not all rock'n'roll."

Ehrke began the quartet groups seven years ago when he filled the then-new woodwind position in the music department. He said the quartets benefit the individual's training.

"Those students will then, I hope, benefit larger groups (ensembles) by playing with the same precision and expertise that they did when with the smaller groups," Ehrke said.

Seven members comprise these two groups, Ehrke playing in both of them. In other words, Ehrke is the fourth player in both groups.

Other members of the saxophone quartet include Andy Collingsworth, Lori Ponton, Jeff Laakso.

The clarinet quartet is made up of Linda Wilson, Cathy Chapman and Les Olds.

Ehrke plays soprano saxophone and principal clarinet.

Both quartets perform for the area schools.

"We've hit both the junior high and high schools in our area thoroughly since I've been here and we've gotten out into some of the Northern California schools," Ehrke said.

The group will also tour selected junior colleges and high schools in Las Vegas, Sacramento, and the Bay Area.

Such frequent touring not only benefits the host schools. Ehrke said it also helps UNR's recruiting efforts.

"We have a lot of great students playing this year and I think it's a direct outgrowth of our touring," he said. "We'll hit three or four schools in a day...play for them, demonstrate the instruments, and work with their students in their band program on how to better play the instrument."

On whether or not any of those students will excel musically, Ehrke has this philosophy:

"You start with a basically capable person, then it's a matter of desire."

Such was the case with Ehrke, who started out as an accordionist, playing professionally when he was eleven years old. Although he can now play clarinet or saxophone full time with a symphony orchestra, Ehrke resists the idea.

"I decided a doctorate was the way to go, so I can teach, as well as play," he said.

He attributes his own success to a couple of former teachers.

"(They were) people who cared enough to really dedicate themselves to firing young people up, and I thought, 'Well, we need more of those people, not less,'" Ehrke said.

PERFORMANCE CALENDAR

• Oct. 21, 8 p.m.: Dr. Ehrke performs a saxophone and clarinet recital at the Church Fine Arts Theater.

• Nov. 13, 8 p.m.: Linda Wilson and Andy Collingsworth will perform a departmental recital in the Alumni Lounge.

• Nov. 21, 7 p.m., 8:30 p.m.: Both quartets perform at Truckee Meadows Community College.

• Dec. 5, 8 p.m.: Both quartets perform in the Alumni Lounge.

Hitchhiker's guide leads you through universe

By GEOFFREY SCHUMACHER
The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy
 by Douglas Adams. (Pocket Books, 1979).

When the average reader sets out to read a science-fiction novel, he or she usually expects a particular type of story.

He or she expects laser ray guns, starships, maniac computers and weird alien beings to be the main elements of the nuclear-devastated story.

Although this stereotype of science-fiction literature is hardly an accurate one, "The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy" by Douglas Adams indeed includes most of these typical story elements.

However, Adams handles computers and starships and the like in quite a different way than your average pulp sci-fi writer.

"Hitchhiker" is a funny book. The writing of plot and detail is not serious at any moment in the novel. Adams can make the reader laugh out loud once every chapter, guaranteed.

The plot of the story is at first glance very simple. Yet when one attempts an explanation, it becomes wholly complex.

The Earth is destroyed by alien beings and all its inhabitants are killed with the exception of Arthur Dent who escapes just in time with Ford Prefect, an alien "hitchhiker" who has been living on Earth for 15 years.

Arthur and Ford "hitch a ride" with the alien marauders and are on their way to the outer reaches of the universe.

One of the centrally important characters in "Hitchhiker" is an encyclopedia-of-sorts that contains everything that is known about the universe.

Ford has a copy of this book which is so comprehensive that the only way to have all the information at one's disposal at one time is to have it in a computer.

Every now and then, Arthur and Ford call up some info on a subject and the computer gives a humorous account of its history or some good advice.

The encyclopedia is called "The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy."

More than one million copies of "Hitchhiker" have been sold around the world since its publication in 1979 and each of its four sequels have been major sellers.

If a reader is looking for an intelligent satire to take his mind off studying for a few hours, he should pick up a copy of this novel. It will bring laughter . . . guaranteed.

Free films on Saturday nights

By LOREN SCHMIDT

Free concerts and films will be presented Saturday nights until Christmas break at University Family Fellowship church as a part of "Saturday Nights at 8 p.m."

"We want to offer college- and high school-age people an alternative to partying on Saturday night," spokesman Jeff Peterson said.

Future events include comedy group Isaac Air Freight Oct. 5, the Altar Boys Oct. 12, Sheila Walsh Nov. 16 and Michelle Pillar Dec. 7.

"The films and concerts are for non-Christians as well as Christians," Peterson said.

UFF is a non-denominational evangelical church. It was started two years ago by Pastor Robert Owens in his backyard. Since that time the church has met in Pastor Owens' house, under a tent, in an old post office building, and finally in its present location at 1875 Oddie Blvd. in Sparks.

During this time the church has grown from four to 400 people, with its outreach including Pastor Owens' TV show on Channel 21.

All events are free, but an offering will be taken. For more information contact the church at 786-8884.

the health service this year after the administration altered the per credit fee, taking $2 from the money intended for health services and transferring it to athletics.

Lancaster said if the same number sign up for health services next year as did this year, the services will suffer.

It will have to scale back and only be able to provide for those who pay initially and not drop-ins.

Lancaster told the senate Ray Wedmore from the parking office will be at the next senate meeting to discuss students' parking concerns.

Lancaster said students will be invited and the meeting will be moved to the Alumni Lounge if more space is needed.

JUNIORS, SENIORS AND GRADUATE STUDENTS ELIGIBLE

Fall baseball opens today at Moana

By GEOFFREY SCHUMACHER

The UNR fall baseball season begins today and Saturday with the Wolf Pack taking on Modesto J.C. at the Moana Stadium. Both games begin at 2 p.m.

UNR Coach Gary Powers is primarily concerned with getting his young team some experience this fall.

"You're supposed to beat the junior colleges," Powers said. "But we are more interested in the fact that we are playing another team than ourselves for a change."

Powers cut his roster to 32 players. He has 15 pitchers, five catchers, seven outfielders, and nine infielders to work with.

The starting squad for today's game will tentatively be Mike Bates at first base, Mike Baker at second, Scott Anderson at shortstop, either Todd Hill or Phil Rojas at third, Giovanni Puccinelli or Jose Serrato at catcher, and Lance Bradford, Jeff Barry, Chris Gonzalez, Rob Richie and Puccinelli dividing up the outfield duties.

Of the 15 pitchers, Powers said Mark Titchener, Jeff Barry, Todd Vincent, Hal Hennenfent, Fred Sabatine, Rob Sparks, Andrew Bearden, Darin Manning, and Chris Houser are scheduled to test their arms.

"In the next six weeks we will play everyone (on the roster) and try to get the kids as much playing time as possible," Powers said. "At the same time, we will try to figure out who will start for us in the spring."

Guy Yamaoka, the only returning pitcher from last season for UNR, will miss the first part of the season and possibly the rest of the year, Powers said.

Yamaoka has had surgery on his right shoulder and is slowly recovering.

The loss of Yamaoka leaves the Pack pitching staff without any hurlers with experience in Division I baseball.

"We are going to have to work a lot harder with the pitchers this fall with the loss of Yamaoka," Powers said.

The loss of Yamaoka is a big setback for the team but the main thing the players must work on is the "second-nature" of a major college player, according to Powers.

UNR is lacking players that have picked up their verbal skills and knowledge of signs that is needed to play Division I ball.

"There is a big difference between UNR and high school baseball and the kids haven't really had to concentrate for nine full innings before," Powers said.

Above all, Powers is hoping to have a busy fall season in order to provide some much-needed experience for his players.

"There is no substitute for experience," he said.

Ault speaks on cleaning up university athletics

In response to the latest college football scandal at Texas Christian University and the upcoming NCAA President's Commission meeting, Sports Illustrated came up with a 10-point plan to clean up college sports.

UNR football coach Chris Ault responded to the plan that appears in the Sept. 30 issue of SI.

1. SHARPLY LIMIT THE NUMBER OF ATHLETES ACCEPTED AS SPECIAL CASES. Ault said UNR doesn't get any athletes that don't meet the normal entrance requirements.

2. MAKE FRESHMEN INELIGIBLE FOR VARSITY SPORTS. Ault called this ridiculous.

"If a freshman is mature enough he should be allowed to play," he said.

3. INSIST ON SATISFACTORY PROGRESS TOWARD A DEGREE. Ault said this was redundant since it is already an NCAA rule.

4. MAKE SPORTS LESS TIME CONSUMING. Ault said this will never happen.

"This one is stupid," he said. "I think sports all-year around keeps them busy and out of trouble."

5. GUARANTEE SCHOLARSHIPS. Ault said drugs, discipline problems and academic difficulties are the only reasons a football player can lose his scholarship.

6. TIE THE NUMBER OF SCHOLARSHIPS TO GRADUATION RATES. Ault feels it is not his job to make athletes graduate.

"That is an individual right," he said. "Too much is put on athletics here. My job is to make sure a kid makes academic progress while he is here."

"The top educators are missing the whole boat here. Only about 33 percent or less of all people (not only athletes) graduate. Not everyone wants to graduate."

Ault said 67-70 percent of his players graduated during his first eight and a half years at UNR. That is against the national average of 48 percent. During that period an average of 12 players graduated per year. During Ault's tenure 67 players graduated while 14-15 went elsewhere to complete their degrees.

"I was a Phi Beta Kappa here," the former UNR quarterback said. "There's nothing that makes me prouder than to say I graduated from Nevada."

7. ABOLISH ATHLETIC DORMITORIES. Ault said UNR doesn't have one and that he is against them altogether. The basketball players do stay in the College Inn but only because it is the only dorm open during the winter break.

8. ABOLISH ANABOLIC

STEROIDS. Ault said if the team physician prescribes any drug he would allow it. In the same breath he said he was all for drug testing.

9. ELIMINATE TRIVIAL ECONOMIC RULES. Ault agrees that the sole payment made to college athletes should be their scholarships. He feels there is no room for cheating in college sports but not being able to give a kid a poster is ridiculous.

10. MAKE IT ILLEGAL FOR A BOOSTER TO OFFER MONEY TO

COLLEGE ATHLETES. Ault strongly agrees with this one. He feels that when an athlete is getting paid, the Boosters are running the program with the coaches losing control.

Ault's final comment was that the smaller schools like UNR pay for the big schools like TCU's mistakes.

"The Big boys wag the tail," Ault said. "They decide what should be done."

Ault feels that everyone should have an opinion.

Travis leads golf team to title

UNR golfer Eddie Travis nearly didn't make the team for the Coca Cola Wolf Pack Classic at the Incline golf course.

After a tense playoff for the final spot, Travis, a sophomore from Fallon, guided the Pack to a victory in the 16-team tournament with a third place individual finish.

"I have a new attitude this year," Travis said. "I just went out to enjoy myself. I tried to forget about the bad holes."

Tournament medalist was Oregon's Rob Huff with a 217 total for the 54 holes. Oregon State player Scott Kramer was second at 218 with Travis at 219 after rounds of 75, 72, 72.

After host UNR opened up a four shot lead during Monday morning's first round the Pack was never challenged. The team total of 892 left UNR with a 3-shot cushion over Oregon.

"It was a great start to the season and a great win," UNR golf coach John Legarza said. "There were some good teams here. Oregon almost won a big tournament in New Mexico just the week before."

Also contributing to the season opening victory for the Pack was Canadian freshman Steve Watson who totaled 225 after rounds of 72, 77, 76. Robert Willis finished tied with Mark Gilmartin at 228 and Robert Icban with a strong final round of 72 totaled 229.

In team standings, Oregon at 895 was second, Oregon State at 897, third, with California and San Jose, a top 20 team a year ago, tied for fourth at 905.

The next tournament for the Pack will be the New Mexico State Classic at Las Cruces on Oct. 11 and 12.

Pack to face Grizzlies in Montana

By GREG BORTOLIN

When UNR got off to a 3-0 start the fans were predicting a perfect record. After Idaho beat the Wolf Pack 25-21 there weren't enough of them to fill a charter flight to Missoula, Mont., for Saturday's game.

To say the least, the tough loss has brought UNR back down from the heavens. The Pack is in second place at 1-1 in league play behind 2-0 Idaho. They fell from second to 11th in the 1-AA and from 31st to 54th in the USA Today's computer poll.

UNR coach Chris Ault is one who isn't concerned with the polls or impressed by Idaho.

"Idaho didn't beat us, we lost that game," he said. "Bad pass routes by the receivers and missed reads by the quarterback cost us on offense."

"Our defense just played poor."

Ault said Montana's defense is better than Idaho's. The Grizzlies will be a good match for quarterback Eric Beavers.

"This is going to be another great test for us," Ault said.

The Grizzley defense is anchored by right tackle Shawn Poole. At 6-4 and 268 pounds, the junior is considered a pro-candidate. Poole leads the linemen with 16 tackles. The defensive backfield of Terry Shillam, Ted Ray, Nat Odden and Tony Breland is the reason Montana's pass defense is third in the league.

Strong safety Shillam leads the group with 29 tackles. Ault called free safety Ray very dangerous with 4.3 seconds in 40 yards speed. Linebacker Doug Sexe has a team-leading 39 tackles.

As for UNR on offense, Fullback Charvez Foger's bruised toe and run-ing back Anthony Gooden's back are on the mend. Ault said both are doubtful but just might see action.

"On offense we've got to spruce up the running game," Ault said.

Montana's offense has been sporadic at best. It is seventh overall in the league and last in passing. Running out of the wishbone, Ault said

Stanford important for men, women

By KELLI DuFRESNE

Saturday the men's and women's cross country teams will compete at the Stanford Invitational.

The women will compete against 15 teams including Arizona State, Northern Arizona, Pacific, Oregon, Cal-Berkeley, Cal-Poly San Luis Obispo and Stanford.

"Cal-Berkeley, Cal-Poly and Stanford will be the toughest," coach Tony Melody said.

Melody said only the top seven runners will be making the trip. The others will be running in the Karl's Hotel-Casino Fun Run in Sparks on Sunday.

The top seven runners are Patty Young, Stephanie Mousset-Jones, Francie Pullen, Laura DeVoglier, Tina Williamson, Sandra Berlet and Teri Speth.

Runners in the Karl's fun run are Lisa Vogt, Theresa Mills, Liz Armentrout and Terese Delise.

"We are doing easier workouts than usual," Melody said. "I want the women to be limber and ready to run Saturday, not tired and sore."

Billy won't assist

By MIKE SULLIVAN

Former UNR star point guard Billy Allen will not be hired as a full-time assistant basketball coach, due to a state and university nepotism policy.

UNR President Joe Crowley said the policy, which is part of the Nevada Revised Statutes and UNR administrative manual, states that it is unlawful for a department head to supervise a family member within his department.

"After we learned about this policy, we were pretty sure that this would be the result," basketball coach Sonny Allen said Tuesday.

The assistant coach position opened up after Ed Hall resigned in early September to take a similar job at Towson State.

Billy Allen was then considered a strong candidate to take over the position on his father's staff.

The position will be filled on an emergency basis by part-time assistant Kermit Young. Young joined the UNR staff last year.

"Kermit will probably fill the position for the six-month emergency period," Coach Allen said. "That's who I'm recommending."

The university administration will still have to approve Allen's recommendation and if they give an affirmative, Young will take the position for a temporary six-month period.

The position will then become open after the six-month period.

Billy Allen, the NCAA's career assist leader, is undecided as to what his future plans will be.

"He will either come back to Reno and go to graduate school, or continue to play basketball," Coach Allen said. "If he does come back to school, he will help us as a grad student. That way he won't be a state employee."

If Billy Allen decides to return to UNR, he will pursue his master's in physical education, while helping out with the team.

Otherwise, he will return to Florida, where he is a member of the Florida Stingers of the Continental Basketball Association, and play out his third season for that team.

Billy Allen is in Florida, and was unavailable for comment.

Spikers travel to Bay Area

By KELLI DuFRESNE

The UNR volleyball team, tied for first with Pepperdine in West Coast Athletic Conference goes on the road against San Francisco tonight and Santa Clara Saturday.

"The girls and I are looking forward to being on the road," head coach Lane Murray said. "It will test our strength as a team."

The Wolf Pack will be led by Susan Denison, ranked seventh in the WCAC in hitting, 10th in kills, fourth in aces and fourth in blocking.

Dennison will combine with team members Stacy Johnson, ranked sixth in blocking, and Summer Gerlach ranked second in assists, against the Lady Dons, who are in last place in the WCAC, and Santa Clara which was ranked second behind Pepperdine in the pre-season coaches' poll.

"We need to play as good as we did last Friday," Murray said. "We could surprise these two teams if we play with intensity and consistency."

The Wolf Pack opened its WCAC season last Friday with impressive victories over San Diego and U.S. International.

Sharon O'Connell, who is coming on strong as a front-row player blocking and hitting, along with Loreece Porter will be a key factor in this weekend's games, Murray said.

"Volleyball is a team sport," Murray said. "We need strong performances by all athletes to win these games."

"Each person performs differently each game. There are no stars."

"The girls have had two hard practices, Monday and Tuesday. They realize they will have to work harder and harder for every league game. Their hard work now will help them to concentrate on game situations and earn their victories."

and the emotional part with the ones not in the top seven. They need to concentrate on reaching their goals."

Each team member at the beginning of the season turned in a goal sheet, a list of five goals they hope to achieve.

"It can really help when you have something to strive for," Melody said. "When you are away from home, family and friends, sometimes it's all you have."

Melody and his wife Terry have a Sunday-morning "pancake, powwow, pig out" for the girls.

"Here I think I am less of a coach and more of a person," Melody said. "It also helps to get the girls out of the dorms for a while."
